Barbara Piercy – August 28, 2016

I gave my Yorkshire Terrier a BRAVECTO for ticks and fleas treatment. Her age was thirteen but she was a bouncy, playful healthy little girl.

Six days later on our daily walk she became ill with diorrea. Shortly after returning home she started to vomit too.

At first we thought she had eaten something that didn't agree so didn't worry to much. Then two hours later she started to pass and vomit blood. We rushed her to the vet, by the time she arrived she was dehydrated and very poorly.

Alas she never recovered and died two days later. I have been told by the vet her organs had failed. I googled the side effects of the treatment and was horrified. We will never be sure why she died, maybe she was just old, my vet did his best to save her.
