Debbie Hutchison Grishaber - West Virginia, USA

I gave my 6 year old, 15 lb Morkie bravecto on June 8th and woke up June 10th to vomit and diahrea from one end of my house to the other. Immediately took to my vet and he was given fluids and endosorb to try to stop the symtoms.

He became so lethargic that he laid on my bed a full day without moving. I carried him outside to potty but he wouldn't even stand. We used a cooking spoon to give him tastes of water thru the night. He seemed to start feeling a little better a day later. Vet gave me canned critical care food and he ate a small amount.

Made chicken and rice and ate some of it too. Two days later, Back to the vet. Quit eating and symptoms returned. Endosorb no longer controlled the diahrea. Blood work came back fine. My once active dog now lays around all day, poops on himself and refuses ALL food. His stomach now looks bloated. Tomorrow I have another vet looking at him in hopes of delving deeper into what we can do. I have never felt so helpless. He looks so sad and wants me to fix him.

I called Merck and did get a case #, but not sure what good that will do me. It's been almost 2 months since I gave him bravecto and I just keep hoping it will get better. I just wish I could take it back. I feel so responsible. I WANT TO FIX HIM [?] the pics are before and now

Update:

August 08, 2016

I lost my sunshine today. Seriously the hardest thing I've ever had to do in my life. My heart is broken. I would have fixed you if I could baby boy. Go play in the clouds Char. Now you can swim all you want. I'll see you again.
